

Stellantis Women of Color Earn Recognition at Annual STEM Conference

- Conference honors significant achievements of women of color in STEM
- Stellantis employees consistently earn important technical professional recognition from diversity-centered organizations
- Diverse talent fuels company's innovation and ensures products exceed expectations of customers

October 12, 2021, Auburn Hills, Mich. - Stellantis business leaders received honors for their career, technical and community achievements at the annual Women of Color STEM Conference, held virtually October 7-9.

The Women of Color Conference honors the significant achievements of women in STEM and ensures that the accomplishments of outstanding women in technical fields are highly visible to industry professionals, government officials and students.

Stellantis employees continue to earn important technical and professional recognition from leading organizations, such as Inforum, Society of Automotive Engineers, Automotive News and more, reflecting the company's strong commitment to recruiting and developing a diverse workforce.

"Our diverse talent at Stellantis fuels our company's innovation and ensures our products exceed the expectation of our customers," said Lottie Holland, Director, Diversity, Inclusion, Engagement and EEO Compliance, Stellantis – North America. "The Women of Color Awards celebrate many of the country's most promising and influential female technical business leaders and Stellantis is proud that our women technical leaders are regarded consistently among such accomplished professionals."
