This includes technology for school-aged children, online academic supports, mental health counselling, and the food bank network that helps to distribute food to thousands of people in Windsor-Essex County.

"Our employees repeatedly serve as champions within our local community through their overwhelming generosity by giving back to those less fortunate, and I could not be more appreciative of their efforts," said Jeff Hines, Canada president and CEO. "With a focus on education, Stellantis and our partners at the United Way share a common goal in providing today's youth with the skills and knowledge as a foundation for future success, and it would not be possible without this donation."

"At Local 444, we're committed to helping our members and the community. Supporting initiatives like the United Way ensures vital funds stay right here in Windsor-Essex," said James Stewart, president, Unifor Local 444. "Local 444 believes in the strength of teamwork, and this is another example where the collective generosity from our members year-after-year ensures the proper resources are available for those in need. United Way-funded programs for 2024 calendar year

Donations provided by Stellantis and its employees in the local area will support the United Way Centraide Windsor-Essex Chatham-Kent education-focused programs that support youth throughout their formal schooling years.

United Way's On Track To Success program offers supports that wrap around a family and help youth graduate high school and go on to post-secondary education – students receive mentoring, tutoring, career learning opportunities and financial assistance to attend post-secondary programs to name a few.

For younger students, Ignite Academy, the first community-designed solution, aims to bolster literacy and math competencies. This program operates after school four days a week, targeting students from grades 2-7. The participating schools are in priority neighbourhoods with the highest rates of childhood poverty.

100% of donations to United Way stays right here in Windsor-Essex County and helps create a stronger community, for all of us, for the future by helping local kids on a path to success in school and life.
