- Most powerful pickup in mid-size segment, with a new 4.7-liter V-8 engine producing 302 horsepower, a 31 percent improvement, and 329 lb.-ft. of torque, a 13 percent improvement, while providing more than 5 percent improved fuel economy
- New exterior and interior in two cab styles with six trim levels
- Greatest interior space of any mid-size truck, largest and longest standard cargo bed in its class, best-in-class towing capability, only pickup in segment to offer full-time four-wheel drive

July 8, 2007, Auburn Hills, Mich. - Dodge announced pricing today for the new 2008 Dodge Dakota, which features six trim levels, new exterior and interior styling, many best-in-class capabilities and the most power of any pickup in the mid-size segment.

The new 2008 Dodge Dakota is available for $20,080 for Extended Cab models, and $22,780 for Crew Cab models. Prices include $645 destination. The new 2008 Dodge Dakota arrives in dealerships in August.

“Dodge Dakota is the perfect vehicle for people who are looking for a great-looking, capable, powerful and versatile truck that can support a variety of lifestyle activities,” said Mike Accavitti, Director – Dodge Brand and SRT Communications. “With two different cab styles, six trim levels and a tremendous number of available features, the new 2008 Dodge Dakota can be configured for any customer’s needs – all at a great value.”

For 2008, the Dodge Dakota will again be offered in two body styles – Extended Cab and Crew Cab – and six trim levels: ST, SXT, SLT, TRX/TRX4, Sport and Laramie.

The 2008 Dodge Dakota’s exterior includes a newly styled hood, grille, front fascia, rear spoiler, fenders and headlamps. All-new fascias integrate with the restyled grille and incorporate fog lamps. The 2008 Dodge Dakota’s tailgate includes a new spoiler that helps smooth air flow over the rear of the truck to improve fuel economy, and the top surface of the cargo box has a new protective surface.

The new 2008 Dodge Dakota’s interior includes a new instrument panel, center console, accent finishes and several new interior storage choices. For 2008, the Dodge Dakota also offers the MyGIG™ Multimedia Infotainment System with 20-gigabyte hard drive and navigation radio. The 2008 Dodge Dakota Extended Cab’s available Full Swing™ rear access doors open nearly 170 degrees – unique in the segment – to an interior with class-leading room and seating for five. With rear seats folded, up to 30 cubic feet of storage space is available. A total of four storage hooks are located on the Extended Cab’s rear interior panel.

Separately, the 2008 Dodge Dakota Crew Cab offers best-in-class room — 37.1 cubic feet — and seating for up to six. With rear seats folded, a new under-seat storage system, a first for Dodge Dakota, is easily accessible. This system includes a unique, collapsible and removable cargo management system that enables gear to be organized and taken anywhere. In addition, both the Extended and Crew Cabs offer a new cargo box utility rail system with four moveable tie-down cleats to facilitate storage needs.

The new 2008 Dodge Dakota is the most powerful mid-size pickup on the market, by virtue of a new V-8 engine — the only V-8 option available in the mid-size pickup segment.

The new 4.7-liter V-8 offers more power and torque plus more than 5 percent better fuel economy than the previous 4.7-liter High Output engine. It also delivers improvements in refinement. It produces 302 horsepower, a 31 percent increase; and 329 lb.-ft. of torque, a 13 percent increase. The new engine is also capable of operating on E85 ethanol fuel, making the Dodge Dakota equipped with this engine a Flexible Fuel Vehicle (FFV).

The new 2008 Dodge Dakota may be equipped with a transfer case featuring two-wheel drive or four-wheel drive with locked high and low ranges, or an available transfer case with full-time four-wheel drive, as well as selections for locked high and low ranges. The 2008 Dodge Dakota is also the only pickup in its segment to offer full-time four-wheel drive.

2008 Dodge Dakota ST Extended Cab and Crew Cab

Powered by a 3.7-liter V-6 engine producing 210 horsepower and 235 lb.-ft. of torque, the new 2008 Dodge Dakota ST's standard features include a six-speed manual transmission, 16-inch styled steel wheels, dual-position tailgate, tinted windshield and front door windows, rear spoiler, four-pin trailer tow connection, power steering, air conditioning, interior courtesy lamps, power accessory delay, cloth bucket seats, AM/FM/CD/MP3 radio and advanced multi-stage air bags.
